ORDER

15 Defendant moves this Court to vacate, set aside, or correct his conviction and sentence
16 under 28 U.S.C. § 2255, arguing that Rehaif v. United States, 139 S. Ct. 2191 (2019), retroactively
17 rendered the indictment fatally defective. (ECF No. 41.) Thorough review of the record demon-
18 strates conclusively that Defendant is neither entitled to relief nor a certificate of appealability.
19 The Court therefore denies the motion.<sup>1</sup>

23 <sup>1</sup> During the pendency of the motion, the Supreme Court has issued an opinion further analyzing 24 Rehaif—Greer v. United States, 141 S. Ct. 2090, 2104 (2021). The Government moves to supplement its response with Greer (ECF No. 47), and Defendant did not object, but instead, also provides further argumentation from Greer (ECF No. 48). The Court grants the Government’s motion and will consider the supplemental briefing.

FACTUAL BACKGROUND

Defendant has an extensive criminal history that began in the early Nineties. At age 18, he was arrested for felony possession of a controlled substance. (Present. Rep. ¶ 29.) A year later, he was convicted of petty theft. (Id. ¶ 30.) In 1996, he pleaded guilty to felony assault with a deadly weapon and was sentenced to sixteen months of custody. (Id. ¶ 31.) Later that year, he was convicted of a misdemeanor obstructing/resisting a public officer and felon in possession of a firearm and sentenced to fifty-four months in prison. (Id. ¶ 32.) In 2006, Defendant was convicted of driving with a suspended license and sentenced to probation. (Id. ¶ 33.) In 2009, Defendant was convicted of felony possession of a controlled substance for sale and sentenced to sixteen months' imprisonment. (Id. ¶ 34.) In 2012, Defendant was again convicted of felony possession of a controlled substance for sale and was sentenced to nineteen to forty-eight months imprisonment. (Id. ¶ 35.)

On November 11, 2014, officers in Reno, Nevada, stopped a car in which Defendant was a passenger. (Present. Rep. ¶ 6.) Officers approached the car and smelled marijuana. (Id.) During a search of the car, officers found a bag containing 0.8 gross grams of cocaine and a duffle bag containing 36.9 gross grams of marijuana. (Id. ¶¶ 7–8.) Officers attempted to handcuff Defendant, but he fled from the officers. (Id. ¶ 9.) As Defendant was running, officers saw Defendant take off two large jackets and reach into his waistband before tripping and falling to the ground. (Id.) Defendant ignored commands from officers to stay on the ground, fled a second time, and again reached into his waistband. (Id. ¶¶ 9–10.) Officers eventually stopped Defendant and handcuffed him. (Id. ¶ 10.) Inside one of the jackets Defendant threw while running, officers found a loaded Glock .45 caliber handgun. (Id. ¶ 11.)

Shortly thereafter, a federal grand jury indicted Defendant for unlawfully possessing a firearm, initiating this case. (ECF No. 1.) The indictment did not allege that Defendant knew he was

1 a felon or knew that he was prohibited from possessing a firearm.<sup>2</sup> (Id.) For the allegations sup-
2 porting the count, it only reads:

3 On or about November 11, 2014, in the State and District of Nevada, EMANI W.
4 GORDON, defendant herein, having been convicted of a crime punishable by im-
5 prisonment for a term exceeding one year in the Second Judicial District Court of 6 the State of Nevada in and for the County of Washoe, to wit: Possession of a Con-
7 trolled Substance with the Intent to Sell, on or about June 20, 2012; did knowingly
8 possess a Glock .45 caliber semi-automatic pistol, bearing serial number TRF913, 9 said possession being in and affecting commerce; in violation of Title 18, United 10 States Code, Sections 922(g)(1) and 924(a)(2).

11 (Id.) In May 2015, Defendant pleaded guilty to the one-count indictment without a plea agreement.
12 (ECF No. 23; Present. Rep. ¶ 2.) On September 21, 2015, this Court sentenced Defendant to 13 eighty-four months' imprisonment with three years of supervised release to follow. (ECF Nos. 36, 14 37.) Defendant did not appeal. Now, Defendant moves under § 2255, claiming that subsequent 15 changes in the law render this conviction invalid. (ECF No. 41.) The Court ordered the Govern-
16 ment to respond, and it has. (ECF Nos. 42, 43.)

17 LEGAL STANDARD

18 A prisoner in custody “may move the court which imposed the sentence to vacate, set aside
19 or correct the sentence” where the sentence is unconstitutional or unlawful, the court lacked “ju-20 risdiction to impose such sentence,” “the sentence was in excess of the maximum authorized by 21 law, or is otherwise subject to collateral attack.” 28 U.S.C. § 2255(a). This remedy is available 22 only where the error is jurisdictional, constitutional, contains “a fundamental defect which inher-
23 ently results in a complete miscarriage of justice,” or includes “an omission inconsistent with the

<sup>2</sup> Defendant claims that Rehaif mandates that the Government must prove both that a defendant knew of his felony status and knew that this status prohibited him from possessing a firearm. This is error. Following Rehaif, the entirety of the Government’s burden for a conviction under § 922(g)(1) is to prove “(1) the defendant was a felon; (2) the defendant knew he was a felon; (3) the defendant knowingly possessed a firearm or ammunition; and (4) the firearm or ammunition was in or affecting interstate commerce.” United States v. Benamor, 937 F.3d 1182, 1186 (9th Cir. 2019), cert. denied, 140 S. Ct. 818 (2020).

1 rudimentary demands of fair procedure.” Hill v. United States, 368 U.S. 424, 428 (1962). A peti-
2 tioner must prove, by a preponderance of the evidence, any grounds for vacating or modifying a 3 sentence. Johnson v. Zerbst, 304 U.S. 458, 468–69 (1938).

4 A court should deny the petition without an evidentiary hearing if the record “conclusively
5 show[s] that the prisoner is entitled to no relief.” § 2255(b); accord Shah v. United States, 878
6 F.2d 1156, 1160 (9th Cir. 1989). Otherwise, a court should serve notice upon the government and 7 grant a hearing to make the necessary findings of fact and conclusions of law to rule on the petition.
8 § 2255(b).

9 Upon denial, a court should determine whether to issue a certificate of appealability. Rules
10 Governing § 2255 Proceedings 11(a). A certificate is appropriate when the applicant has “made a 11 substantial showing of the denial of a constitutional right.” 28 U.S.C. § 2253(c)(2). That is, the 12 petitioner must show that “reasonable jurists could debate whether . . . the petition should [be]
13 resolved in a different manner or that the issues presented [are] ‘adequate to deserve encourage-14 ment to proceed further.’” Slack v. McDaniel, 529 U.S. 473, 484 (2000) (quoting Barefoot v. Es-
15 telle, 463 U.S. 880, 893 (1983)).

16 ANALYSIS

17 Defendant argues that the failure of the indictment to include an allegation that Defendant
18 knew he was in the class of persons covered by § 922(g)(1) is a structural error, depriving the 19 Court of jurisdiction and rendering his conviction unconstitutional. Specifically, he claims the 20 criminal prosecution based on the defective indictment violated his Fifth Amendment right not to 21 be tried absent a valid indictment from a grand jury and his Sixth Amendment rights to notice and 22 effective assistance of counsel. Finding that it has jurisdiction and that Defendant’s guilty plea
23 waived the remaining challenges, the Court denies the motion.

24 ///

1 I. The Court has Subject-Matter Jurisdiction

2 Defendant's first argument is that the defect in the indictment deprived this Court of juris-
3 diction over his case. (ECF No. 41 at 15–16.) Although he is correct that the indictment in this 4 case is defective, this defect does not deprive this Court of jurisdiction.

5 Framing the issue in such a way is not without consequence because, if true, Defendant did
6 not waive this issue—he could not have. See, e.g., Louisville & Nashville R.R. Co. v. Mottley, 211
7 U.S. 149, 152 (1908); see also United States v. Ratigan, 351 F.3d 957, 962 (9th Cir. 2003) (ana-
8 lyzing subject-matter jurisdiction of a criminal case despite procedural default). Defendant notes
9 that district courts have jurisdiction over “all offenses against the laws of the United States,” 18
10 U.S.C. § 3231, and argues that, since the indictment fails to state an offense, this Court lacks ju-
11 risdiction. While prior Ninth Circuit cases have held that a failure to state a claim in an indictment
12 is a jurisdictional issue, see, e.g., United States v. Montilla, 870 F.2d 549, 552 (9th Cir. 1989)
13 (citing United States v. Broncheau, 597 F.2d 1260, 1262 n. 1 (9th Cir. 1979)), the Supreme Court
14 has overruled these cases in United States v. Cotton, 535 U.S. 625 (2002). See United States v.
15 Salazar-Lopez, 506 F.3d 748, 754 n.5 (9th Cir. 2007) (recognizing that Cotton overruled the cir-16 cuit's prior precedent).

17 In Cotton, the superseding indictment “did not allege any of the threshold levels of drug 18 quantity that lead to enhanced penalties under [21 U.S.C.] § 841(b),” which defendants did not
19 object to before trial. Cotton, 535 U.S. at 628. During the pendency of the appeal to the Fourth
20 Circuit, the Supreme Court held, in an unrelated case that “[o]ther than the fact of a prior convic-21 tion, any fact that increases the penalty for a crime beyond the prescribed statutory maximum must 22 be submitted to a jury, and proved beyond a reasonable doubt.” Apprendi v. New Jersey, 530 U.S.
23 466, 490 (2000). The Fourth Circuit therefore found this omission from the indictment to deprive
24 the court of subject-matter jurisdiction and vacated the sentences. United States v. Cotton, 261

1 F.3d 397, 407 (4th Cir. 2001). The Court found jurisdiction and reversed, noting that it “some time
2 ago departed from [the] view that indictment defects are ‘jurisdictional.’” Cotton, 535 U.S. at 631;
3 see Lamar v. United States, 240 U.S. 60, 65 (1916) (“The objection that indictment does not charge
4 a crime against the United States goes only to the merits of the case.”); United States v. Williams, 5 341 U.S. 58, 66 (1951) (“[T]hat the indictment is defective does not affect the jurisdiction of the 6 trial court to determine the case presented by the indictment.”).

7       Attempting to distinguish Cotton, Defendant advocates for a narrow reading of the opinion.
8 Defendant claims that since the omitted facts in the indictment went toward sentencing, the indict-
9 ment, while defective, still stated a federal crime and, for that reason, the Supreme Court still had 10 jurisdiction in the case. On the other hand, the indictment in the instant case, Defendant argues,
11 omitted a fact that went to an element of the underlying crime. In making this argument, however,
12 Defendant contravenes the text of the Court’s reasoning and lower courts’ ubiquitous interpretation
13 of the case.

14       First, the Supreme Court failed to provide for the caveat that Defendant propounds. It, 15 rather, spoke broadly, stating, “[D]efects in an indictment do not deprive a court of its power to 16 adjudicate a case.” Cotton, 535 U.S. at 630. Second, lower courts have rejected Defendant’s read-
17 ing of Cotton. For example, the Ninth Circuit held that the failure to include the mens rea element 18 of a crime—as Defendant claims here—does not deprive a court of jurisdiction. United States v.
19 Velasco-Medina, 305 F.3d 839, 845–46 (9th Cir. 2002) (overruled on other grounds as recognized 20 in United States v. Aguila-Montes de Oca, 655 F.3d 915, 923 (9th Cir. 2011)). It stated that the 21 defendant’s argument to the contrary was “untenable in light of [Cotton.]” Id.

22       To support his contention, Defendant points to a case from the Eleventh Circuit, United 23 States v. Izurieta, 710 F.3d 1176 (11th Cir. 2013). In that case, the court held that there was no
24 subject-matter jurisdiction when the indictment alleged that the defendant violated a regulation

1 that only carried civil penalties and not a criminal statute. Id. at 1179. The Eleventh Circuit, how-
2 ever, later distinguished Izurieta on that ground and stated, “The district court’s power over [a
3 criminal] case did not vanish simply because the indictment omitted one element of the charged 4 offense.” United States v. Brown, 752 F.3d 1344, 1353 (11th Cir. 2014).

5 Indeed, many courts have already considered and rejected this argument—including the 6 Ninth Circuit (albeit in an unpublished decision). See, e.g., United States v. Pruitt, 839 F. App’x
7 90, 94 (9th Cir. 2020) (“An indictment’s omission of the element that the defendant ‘knew he
8 belonged to the relevant category of persons barred from possessing a firearm’ in violation of 18
9 U.S.C. § 922(g)(1) does not deprive the district court of jurisdiction.” (internal citation omitted));
10 United States v. Hobbs, 953 F.3d 853, 856 (6th Cir. 2020); United States v. Moore, 954 F.3d 1322, 11 1332 (11th Cir. 2020); United States v. Balde, 943 F.3d 73, 92 (2d Cir. 2019); United States v.
12 Dillard, No. 2:09-CR-00057-JAD-GWF, 2020 WL 2199614, at *4 (D. Nev. May 6, 2020). This 13 Court likewise finds that the defect is not a jurisdictional issue.

14 II. The Remaining Claims are Barred by Defendant’s Guilty Plea

15 Satisfied that this Court has jurisdiction, it turns to Defendant’s remaining claims that the 16 defects in the indictment violated his Fifth and Sixth Amendment rights. The Court finds that these 17 claims are barred by Defendant’s guilty plea.

18 In Tollett v. Henderson, 411 U.S. 258 (1973), the Supreme Court addressed whether it
19 could consider a challenge to a grand jury proceeding for the first time through a habeas challenge
20 after the defendant pleaded guilty. The Court held that “a guilty plea represents a break in the chain
21 of events which has preceded it in the criminal process.” Id. at 267. A defendant therefore may not 22 “raise independent claims relating to the deprivation of constitutional rights that occurred prior to 23 the entry of [a] guilty plea. He may only attack the voluntary and intelligent character of the guilty 24 plea by showing that the advice he received from counsel [was constitutionally inadequate].” Id.

1 Despite the broad language of this rule, the Court has recognized an exception to it: a claim
2 may be brought where it “implicates ‘the very power of the State’ to prosecute the defendant.”
3 Class v. United States, 138 S. Ct. 798, 803 (2018) (quoting Blackledge v. Perry, 417 U.S. 21, 30
4 (1974)). This exception is narrow and only applies where “the government cannot prosecute the 5 defendant at all.” United States v. Chavez-Diaz, 949 F.3d 1202, 1208 (9th Cir. 2020); see, e.g.,
6 Menna v. New York, 423 U.S. 61, 62 (1975) (double jeopardy); Blackledge, 417 U.S. at 30–31
7 (vindictive prosecution); Class, 138 S. Ct. at 801–02 (constitutionality of the criminal statute). In 8 such instances, the Court distinguished Tollett on the basis that these alleged antecedent violations
9 could not “have been ‘cured’ through a new indictment.” Class, 138 S. Ct. at 805 (quoting Black- 10 ledge, 417 U.S. at 30).

11 This rule applies even if the alleged defect in the indictment is structural. See United States
12 v. Moussaoui, 591 F.3d 263, 280 n.12 (4th Cir. 2010), as amended (Feb. 9, 2010). A “structural”
13 defect is a “fundamental flaw,” which is “never . . . thought [to be] harmless” and “undermines the 14 structural integrity of the criminal tribunal itself.” Vasquez v. Hillery, 474 U.S. 254, 263–64
15 (1986). Although Tollett did not explicitly discuss whether the underlying constitutional defect—
16 the charge that the government had systematically excluded racial minorities from the grand jury—
17 was structural, such discrimination was a well-established structural defect by the time Tollett was 18 decided. See id. at 261–62 (collecting cases for this proposition dating back to 1881).

19 Defendant neither argues that he entered into the plea agreement unknowingly or involun-
20 tarily through ineffective assistance of counsel nor that the Government could not prosecute him
21 for the crime. Rather, all of the arguments he raises—that the defect in the indictment infringed 22 upon his right to be free from prosecution absent a valid grand jury indictment and his rights to 23 adequate counsel and notice—could be remedied by a new indictment. Although this reasoning
24 has not been directly addressed by the Ninth Circuit, two other circuits have held that the Tollett rule bars habeas relief based on defects in the indictment because of Rehaif. United States v. La-valais, 960 F.3d 180, 186 (5th Cir. 2020) (“To the extent [the defendant] argues his indictment is fatally defective because it did not contain an element of the offense under § 922(g), he failed to preserve that claim by pleading guilty.” (citing Class, 138 S. Ct. at 804–05)); United States v. Dowthard, 948 F.3d 814, 817 (7th Cir. 2020) (“[A] guilty plea waive[s the] right to assert that the indictment fail[s] to state an offense.”). Defendant’s guilty plea therefore bars these claims.

III. Certificate of Appealability

As the Court denies the petition, it must determine whether to issue a certificate of appealability. Defendant has not shown that reasonable jurists would debate these claims nor that the claims should proceed further. See Slack, 529 U.S. at 484. Rather, as discussed above, binding precedent clearly forecloses them. The Court therefore declines to issue a certificate of appealability.
